

the foregoing statement is simple and I believe perfectly correct, and certainly I should suppose all the information you can require on the subject, you have not acknowledged the receipt of the last letter I sent you, which contained a Bank Note that I returned to you, and such replies as I could furnish to some of your former queries. I am very glad to hear that the people are paying the Clerical rent charges in your neighbourhood, but for my part I must confess that I have not as yet received much more than a tenth part of my income, though I have been promised two or three considerable sums before long, if I can do any thing more for you than I have done, I trust you will not hesitate to let me know what it may be as I assure you I shall always feel pleasure in having to do my power to oblige you; and in the mean time allow me to assure you that wishing you many happy returns of the present season I remain

My Dear Sir as ever yours very faithfully
